Meditation with God

By John Lee

What is the most neglected worship in your life: Singing, praying reading, studying...? Well we can all see the need to improve in each of these areas but we do them to some extent. But there is one that many or even most never venture into: MEDITATION.

"We spend most of our lives," said Evelyn Underhill, "conjugating three verbs: to want, to have and to do. But none of these has any ultimate significance until it is transcended by and included in the fundamental verb, to be."

For Christians, the essence of "to be" is to be like Christ: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ." (Philippians 2:5)

Implied in this admonition is that our minds and therefore we are not always like Christ. If this is true then a very important task for us is the orientation of our minds, our thinking, so that it becomes Christ like. We are to replace our thoughts with Godly thoughts; our ways with His ways. But how?

The exchanging of our thoughts for His is a process. A process that feeds on the Word of God and must always be filtered by and through that Word. A process to which the Psalmist refers.

"But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in His law does he meditate day and night." (Psalms 1:2)

Here we have the divine exchange, the mind renewal, the mental regeneration laid before us. His Word shows and tells us not simply what to think but how to think. And it is meditation that truly and forcefully implants those thoughts not only in our minds but in our hearts as well. As we study His Word we learn what and how we should think, but as we meditate on those things it is embedded. And this explains why many more know what God wants them to do than ever achieve that Christ-like mind for themselves.

Christian meditation internalizes and personalizes the Scripture so that its truths affect our thought, our attitude, our action and our lives.

To meditate means "to care for, to ponder, to attend to" from the Greek word meletao.

Paul admonishes Timothy to do this: "Meditate on these things; give yourself entirely to them, that your progress may be evident to all." (1 Tim 4:15) and indicates it is key to Timothy's progress.

Scriptural meditation is not sitting and contemplating world philosophies nor is it succumbing to chants and repetitions. Such things open us to Satan's aggression.

Meditation is also more than study or reading of the word. Rather it is the action of recalling, reflecting, ruminating and thinking deeply on the riches of God and His Word.

In study we walk over and through the pages, but in meditation we ruminate down into them. We take them with us for prolonged thought and consideration. Meditation detaches our mind from the distractions of Satan and the world and reattaches them to the thinking and thoughts of Christ. It is the process wherein the Word becomes something we not only read but ingest. Christian meditation internalizes and personalizes the Scripture so that its truths affect our thought, our attitude, our action and our lives.

Therefore, when we try to gain the mind of Christ or be like Christ in the absence of meditation, we will find frustration and never achieve the essential goal.

Yet for many, mediation is a lost, or more likely, a never developed part of their Christianity. And it should not surprise us that a society that wants everything fast and easy would also want to give us instant “Mind of Christ”. But such is not the way of the Lord.

Quiet, meditative times have always been a key ingredient in the Lord’s recipe for godly development. It is an invaluable companion of godly men and women.

Time for rumination, quiet time away from distractions, alone with God and his word are the enrichers of our minds.

While many struggle with the reading and studying of God’s word, I fear far more struggle with the discipline of meditation. Where we see not simply how much we can read, but how fully we can glean every morsel of spiritual nourishment from each admonition.

Godly meditation is a difficult, time consuming work and therefore largely avoided. Next to fasting, it may be our most neglected resource.

Yet the truest value of reading God’s word, of studying the lives and sayings of God’s holy people comes as we take time to extract the nourishment from them by chewing and digesting God’s holy food so that its saving strength can pass into our most inner being.

Meditation is the shovel which allows us to not only spade the surface, but mine the deeper gems from the depths of God’s word. In Celebration of Discipline, Richard Foster describes Christian meditation as “sinking down into the light and life of Christ and becoming comfortable in that posture. The perpetual presence of the Lord...moves from a theological dogma to a radiant reality.”

While many struggle with the reading and studying of God’s word, I fear far more struggle with the discipline of meditation.

Does meditation play a central role in your spiritual life? Allowing you to sink down into Christ’s light and life allowing Him to become a radiant reality. It is vitally important to structure some definitive time every day for reflection, introspection and meditation. Focusing our minds on Christ for at least a few minutes each day. Being silent at day’s start knowing that He should speak first, being silent at day’s end knowing God should have the last word. If we don’t, we continue like rocks skimming across life’s surface, never slowing down enough to truly sink in and reach life’s true depths.

John Lee was born Clarinda , Iowa and raised in Martinsville, Indiana. After graduating from Indiana University with a degree in microbiology and biochemistry, he moved to the Kansas City, Missouri area where he met his wife Donna and where they continue to live. Moon landing: Buzz Aldrin took Holy Communion, read this Bible verse on lunar surface. NASA Kept it Quiet.

Apollo 11 landed on the Moon on July 20, 1969.

Published Thursday, July 18, 2019

Fifty years ago, when American astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, a devout Christian, made history landing on the moon, the first thing he did was give thanks to God.

Aldrin, seated next to Neil Armstrong, became the first person to celebrate a religious sacrament on a heavenly body outside Earth. The ordained Presbyterian elder wrote in a piece for Guideposts in 1970 he chose Holy Communion because his pastor at Webster Presbyterian, Dean Woodruff, often spoke about how God reveals Himself through the everyday elements.

"I wondered if it might be possible to take communion on the moon," Aldrin recalled a year after the mission, "symbolizing the thought that God was revealing Himself there, too, as man reached out into the universe. For there are many of us in the NASA program who do trust that what we are doing is part of God's eternal plan for man."

And on July 20, 1969, after the Eagle lunar lander touched down on the surface of the moon, Aldrin pulled out the wafer that was in a plastic packet and the wine, along with a small silver cup provided by his church, which he kept in his "personal-preference kit," before he spoke into the radio, according to the Religion News Service.

"Houston, this is Eagle. This is the LM pilot," Aldrin said, referring to the lunar module, shortly after the Eagle lunar lander touched down on the surface of the moon July 20, 1969.

"I would like to take this opportunity to ask every person listening in, whoever and wherever they may be," Aldrin said, "to pause for a moment and contemplate the events of the past few hours and to give thanks in his or her own way." Aldrin silently read from John 15:5, which he penned on a 3-by-5-inch notecard: "And Jesus said: I am the vine, you are the branches. Whoever remains in me, and I in Him, will bear much fruit; for you can do nothing without me."
